DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 47,51,52,54 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Cazaussus et al (Chromatographia, 1998, 25(10), 865-9). Cazaussus teaches the content of vetiver oil. Cazaussus teaches that two components of vetiver oil are zizanol and bicyclovetivenol. Note that in a claim to a composition, a statement regarding the composition's intended use has no patentable significance.

Claims 25,29,47,48,75 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Harima et al (JP 08081306; 3/26/96). Harima teaches a cockroach repellent comprising nootkatone. The composition is applied to material to repel cockroaches. See abstract, page 2 paragraph 8, page 7.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 49,50 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Harima as applied to claims 25,29,47,48,75 above. Harima teaches all that is recited in claims 49 and 50 except for the invention comprising the instant amounts of nootkatone. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to determine the optimum amount of nootkatone. One would have been motivated to do this in order to make an invention that would have been most effective in repelling cockroaches.

Claims 25-27,30,47,53 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ishida et al (JP 09157116; 6/17/97). Ishida teaches an acaricide composition comprising cedrene. Ishida teaches that the composition is used in a method to control (kill) ticks. See abstract. Ishida does not teach the alpha isomer of cedrene. In the absence of unexpected results, it would have been obvious to use any isomeric form of cedrene in the instant invention. One would have been motivated to do this since isomers are known to exhibit similar activity when employed in the same application. Note that in a claim to a composition, a statement regarding the composition's intended use has no patentable significance.

Claims 47,53 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Sato et al (US 5,200,429; 4/6/93). Sato teaches a topical composition comprising cedrene. See abstract, claims. In the absence of unexpected results, it would have been obvious to use any isomeric form of cedrene. One would have been motivated to do this since isomers are known to exhibit similar activity when employed in the same application. Note that in a claim to a composition, a statement regarding the composition's intended use has no patentable significance.

Other Matters

Based on claim 75 Applicant appears to have inadvertently left out the phrase "or cockroaches" in claim 25 line 4 after the term "ticks". Please make correction or provide an explanation. Examiner has examined the case as if "or cockroaches" is in claim 25 line 4 after "ticks".

Claim Objection

Claims 26,28,31-33 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims. The prior art does not teach the method of employing the instant compounds for repelling ticks. The prior art does not teach or suggest instant method comprising zizanol and/or bicyclovetivenol.
